

BSG SOLICITORS CLOSE GARSTANG OFFICE AFTER 70 YEARS SERVICE

Garstang Solicitors Blackhurst Swainson Goodier have announced the closure of their Garstang office after more than 75 years service.

Said resident Partner David Bennetts “The Garstang office has been at the centre of the town since the 1930’s and most of my career since the 1970’s has been served there. The area and my clients are dear to my heart and I am saddened by the closure. However, in the digital age our premises are no longer fit for the services we deliver and so with regret, we have taken the decision to move out of our Garstang premises.”

David Bennetts

BSG Solicitors have previously been known as Blackhurst Parker & Yates, Swainson Son & Reynolds and Blackhurst Swainson before becoming the firm it is today. In the 1930’s the office only operated on a Thursday when the Garstang Court was open and advocates would visit from Preston. However in 1964 when a developer client needed full time service the BSG office became fully operational which it has been ever since.

David Bennetts added “The Firm aims to continue serving its many clients from Preston and Lancaster as well as using a consulting room in Garstang itself when needed and home visits as required. We deliver a tailored quality of personal service which many appreciate and we will continue to meet our clients’ needs in this way.”

Phlid Packer a consultant with BSG’s Family Law department has spent a number of years serving Garstang clients. She commented “Although I am saddened to be moving out of Garstang, BSG are yet again at the forefront of new developments with the creation of a collaborative law service and shows how responsive we are to our clients needs This is an alternative to the traditional divorce route and can be more cost effective and less confrontational for those involved. Full details of this service is on the firm's web site".

Phlid Packer

Collaborative Law operates within groups of collaborative lawyers (known as Pods) who are registered for this service with Resolution – an independent association of Family Lawyers.

BSG Solicitors have offices in Lancaster and Preston from which all clients will be served. For information please telephone their Lancaster office on 01524 32471.
